With a Bachelor of Health Science and a Bachelor of Applied Science in Osteopathy, she brings a comprehensive understanding of health and wellness to her practice. Specialising in manual therapy aimed at relieving symptoms and addressing the root causes of pain and chronic conditions, Rachel emphasises collaborative treatment plans that include hands-on techniques, rehabilitative exercises, and practical tools for self-management at home. Her approach is distinguished by a passion for patient education, empowering individuals to effectively manage chronic pain and conditions such as Temporomandibular Dysfunction (TMD). Rachel adopts a holistic view of health, integrating her expertise in the musculoskeletal, nervous, skeletal, and digestive systems to promote overall well-being. Driven by a genuine desire to help others, Rachel creates a supportive environment where patients feel empowered and understood in their journey towards health and healing. She strives to deepen her patients' understanding of their bodies and empower them to achieve lasting health and vitality.
